

SECTION: EDITORIAL; Pg. 14A

HEADLINE: READERS WRITE

BYLINE: DANA R. HERMANSON

BODY:

She's in the best position to sacrifice

I could not believe my eyes when reading about former Delta Air Lines and Mirant executive Michele Burns' fight for her lifetime free-flight benefits at bankrupt Delta. According to the article, this executive has been paid millions of dollars and can share in Delta's sacrifices more easily than just about anyone.

Given the continuing furor over executive compensation in the United States, I hope to see a day when more executives will say, "Enough is enough --- I was very well paid for my efforts, and I do not need to pursue every last crumb on the table." Such a posture would go a long way toward restoring the image of business executives and corporate America.

DANA R. HERMANSON

Hermanson, of Marietta, holds the Dinos Eminent Scholar Chair of Private Enterprise at Kennesaw State University, where he is a professor of accounting.