KEYNOTE SPEAKER

Michael J. Coles

Michael Coles has been an entrepreneur all of his life, successfully co-founding the Great American Cookie Company in 1977 and the Charter Bank and Trust in 1987. He later transformed the Caribou Coffee Company from a regional brand to a national and international brand and took it public.

In recognition of Michael's success, leadership and benevolence, Kennesaw State University, named its School of Business as the Michael J. Coles College of Business.

The Edge Connection is a non-profit organization dedicated to helping low-to-moderate income women, minorities, veterans, and persons with disabilities achieve economic independence through entrepreneurial training that provides them with the skills, information and support they need to become self-sufficient business owners and employers in metro Atlanta.

Help us make a difference today and empower metro Atlanta's underserved to create jobs for themselves and other unemployed and low income people in their community through micro-business development. Our community members are more than statistics, they are our future, and we believe in investing in our future!
